

Chapter 2 - Collaboration Catastrophe

Every day I have a period called "Project Block." During this time, I worked in groups and learned about some pretty interesting stuff! One project was about colleges of the future. I was so excited! I wanted our college to be on Mars, but 2 of my group members wanted it to be on the moon.

We argued for days and did not get much done. Looking back, I can see that I was being a little (okay, a lot) close-minded and I didn't even have good reasons for wanting the college on Mars besides the fact that it would be different. Thankfully, my groupmates were patient with me. Next time, I know to be a better listener and to be more openminded when working with others.
